A future remembered

by Pastor Dave Lyle

Christmas, perhaps more than any other time of year, is about remembering. For many of us, idyllic memories of gathering, bleary-eyed, around the tree on Christmas morning and later sitting down to tables heavy-laden for the feast come to mind. At Grace, our memories turn to a darkened sanctuary whose silence is pierced by a single voice, calling us back to David's royal city. In many ways, our memories are the source of joy (even if that means forgetting the not-so-great moments along the way). In other ways, our memories are melancholic. After all, our memories are populated with loved ones who have departed this life or who have become estranged from us.

Our memories of Christmas are, by definition, about the past; about what we have done and where we have been. Christmas itself, however, is a celebration of God's remembrance of

The God who makes promises is not the God who forgets them.

God's memory of the future ...

what God has promised to do. On Christmas, we celebrate God's memory of the future.

Zechariah, silenced for a time for failing to believe the angel's words, suddenly breaks forth in song when his son, John the Baptist, was born:

Thus he has shown the mercy promised to our ancestors,
And has remembered his holy covenant (Luke 1:72).

These words are part of the song we call the Benedictus, sung regularly during Morning Prayer. Zechariah, caught up in the joyful surprise of God's unfolding salvation, announces that God has remembered and kept the promises of old.

This Advent, as we make our way toward the joy of Christmas, we take time to think about just how surprising it is that God has shown such grace and mercy to us. Surprising, yes, but wholly in keeping with God's holy nature. The God who makes promises is not the God who forgets them.

For us, these promises are bound up not in our memories of Christmases past but in the person of the God wrapped up in our humanity, Jesus Christ. His coming is breathtaking, as angels and shepherds will remind us. Christ comes to bring peace on earth. No regime or power shall long withstand his reign. Christ comes to bring goodwill among all people. No separation or estrangement shall last forever. Christ comes to bring healing. No illness, even if it lasts until the end of life, will last forever. Christ comes to raise the dead. The Kingdom of life, in which nothing shall be wrong and all manner of things shall be well, will thrive forever around the throne of Bethlehem's child.

I hope you'll join us throughout Advent, reading the "Advent Surprise" devotions prepared by members of the Grace community and joining us for worship and fellowship on Wednesdays. I know you rejoice with me as we anticipate gathering together again on Christmas Eve. And I pray that God may catch you off guard throughout this season with an abundance of grace and mercy, joy and peace. Even when our memories falter, God's does not. The Lord has remembered you. The Lord remembers the covenant. Christ has been born for you; Christ will come again. In Christ, we have been remembered, joined again to God.

May God catch you off guard throughout this season with an abundance of grace and mercy,
joy and peace.

Sharing your faith is for everyone

It takes practice to talk about where and how God is showing up in your life

by Julie Hinz, Evangelism Committee

Then Jesus went about among the villages teaching. He called the twelve and began to send them out two by two and gave them authority over the unclean spirits. (Mark 6:6b-7)

You probably know the names of those initial “twelve,” but what about today’s disciples? Oh, yeah...that’s us. We are those who continue to be sent out “two by two” into the world to speak the words of the Gospel, to teach the world through our choices, our actions, our attitudes, and our words that Jesus is Lord and that God’s salvation is for everyone.

In most cases our choices, actions, and attitudes are second nature. Acts of kindness, serving others, being loving people — those things are part of our everyday ingrained behaviors. But what about our words? Are we, here at Grace, able and as excited to speak our faith as readily and beautifully as we sing it?

Many of us do not have experience talking about our faith. It is not second nature, but it can be. The only way to get good at something is to practice it. That’s what Grace’s Faith Sharing Groups are all about, and we on the Evangelism Committee would love to have you join one.

Our Faith Sharing Groups are small groups of 6 to 9 folks who meet for one hour a month to simply talk about faith, God, how God works in our lives, why we believe, etc. We began with one group of 11 people. Today we have five groups with 37 people. One group has been meeting for over a year now, and we rejoice in new friendships and closer connections, knowing we can speak openly about ourselves, our faith, and our lives. This is how speaking our faith works — once we start, the Spirit does the rest and gathers the faithful together to do more.

I, for one, would not trade that hour a month for anything. It is truly a time out of time when I can gather with friends to share our lives, consider where God is showing up in our everyday lives, discuss scripture and how it applies to us, share stories of our own faith development, and learn from others to see new things in the Bible that I had not noticed before. It is a chance to put my faith into my own words and get used to hearing those words come out of my mouth. Not only have I become much more comfortable speaking about my faith, I know I am not alone in my discipleship.

The Evangelism Committee is in the process of forming more groups and inviting the entire Grace community to join our Faith Sharing work. We would love to build a community of faith-sharers, people who not only do good works and sing the Gospel, but who also speak God into the world. Someone spoke to each of us about Jesus. It’s now our turn to do the same for the hurting world in which we live.

Important details about Faith Sharing Groups

Faith-Sharing groups meet using whatever format works best for the group. Participants are asked to discern what will work best for their particular group of people. Currently groups are meeting primarily online to accommodate COVID restrictions and comfort levels, work schedules, etc.

During the summer months some groups met in person outdoors at members’ homes. Meeting at church is also possible. This flexibility allows people with a variety of needs and schedules to work this hour into their lives.

Joining a group is not a long-term commitment. Join for a few months and if it is not for you, we will rejoice that you spent some time with us. If you find joy in these gatherings, you are free to stay with your group or even lead a group for as long as you wish.

Treasured traditions return to Christmas worship in 2021

Remember last Christmas? Live-streamed services from an empty sanctuary, maybe with a small choir? Bare-bones mid-week Advent worship, again on livestream? Without the Advent suppers and Cornerstone lunches that bring people together for conversation and fellowship as well as food?

While we were grateful last December to be able to hear the Word preached and sing along with the hymns on YouTube, the restrictions we followed to keep one another safe during the pandemic dampened the joy and sense of belonging we experience when we worship in person, alongside other Christians. This year will look a lot more like the Advent and Christmas traditions we treasure at Grace. Advent suppers are back, and of course, we're singing again in worship service.

Perhaps the most-asked question around Grace lately has been, "Will the Children's Christmas Eve Service be back in person?" Yes, it will, in person at 4:15 and 6 p.m. on December 24. The children will be masked, using the same high-quality masks that the Parish Choir uses each Sunday, and they will follow the social distancing guidelines used in Grace School. The 4:15 service will also be live-streamed.

There are additional Christmas Eve worship services at 8 p.m. and at 10:45 (with music at 10:30). The Lord's Supper is celebrated at both of these services. The late service concludes with congregation members lighting candles and singing "Silent Night." The service of Holy Communion on Christmas morning begins at 10 a.m.

We still need to be careful about protecting ourselves and others from COVID during the winter ahead. While booster shots for adults and vaccinations for young children help to keep everyone safe, all of us have different concerns and different comfort levels with being indoors with many people, even when they're wearing masks. This will understandably affect choices about coming to worship or sharing meals.

Many of Grace's Advent and Christmas services will be live-streamed, making it possible to participate from home or from away-from-home locations. This year, as last year, we remain "Together in Christ," as we celebrate God's presence here on earth in Jesus, the Savior, "wrapped in bands of cloth and lying in a manger." We join the angels' song, "Glory to God in the highest heaven, and on earth peace among those whom he favors!"

Johanna Johnson, Grace School's new music teacher, is new to the preparations for the Children's Christmas Eve service. But she's not new to the service itself. Her three children, now in high school, college and graduate school, attended Grace School and sang and rang handbells in the service for many years.

"It's a very impressive service, and I remember loving it. I never imagined that I would be the one directing the choir!"

School choirs started working on the music especially early this year since students did not have the experience of rehearsing the music over and over again in 2020. As in former years, Johanna reports that "Torches" remains the kids' favorite song.

What's new this year? "We're singing mainly things that have been done over the past four or five years—that kids have some memory of singing, or at least hearing." There are pieces for the school handbell choir, and of course, the descants for "O Come All Ye Faithful" and "Silent Night."

Johanna has discovered that many kids don't know these basic Christmas carols. "It's important for them to have that body of knowledge, to know those words and those tunes."

Children's Christmas Books in the church library

As this busy season takes its hectic toll, how about a snuggle on the couch with your littles and a special storybook? And what better place to find a holiday story that shares the true reason we celebrate Christmas than the Grace Church Library. Check out the atrium cabinet for some recommendations, or stop in at the church library and check out other books on the shelves.

Here are some favorites:

"Christmas Love Letters from God" by Glenys Nellist

This biblical re-telling of the Christmas story from Old Testament prophecy to the visit of the wise men has a clever interactive twist. At the end of each piece of the story there is a flip-up envelope with a personal letter from God to the reader. Lovely illustrations by Rachel Clowes complete the adventure.

"Christmas Tapestry" by Patricia Polacco

A Baptist minister and his family move from Memphis to a struggling congregation in Detroit. The change is a struggle for the two children in the story as Christmas approaches and they miss their old house and friends. Unexpected water damage ruins the altar wall in the church. The pastor and his son come across an old tapestry in a shop in town which they hang in the church to cover the damage before Christmas morning. But this is only a side plot as the history of the tapestry connects to an old Jewish woman they meet at a bus stop and to a surprise and very tender ending. It is Christmas after all.

"If You're Missing Baby Jesus" by Jean Gietzen

You can be the first to check out this book! It's a classic tale about a family who discovers Christmas joy in an unexpected friendship.

"The Christmas Miracle of Jonathan Toomey" by Susan Wojciechowski

This lovely story follows a grumpy woodcarver, Jonathan Toomey, who has lost everything dear to him. He meets seven-year-old Thomas and his mother, who together bring joy slowly back into his life.

Grace Church's library, on the first floor, just inside the Division Street door, is open for self-service on Sundays and during the week when the building is open. There are books for adults and children, fiction and non-fiction, including lots of resources for celebrating Advent and Christmas.

Advent Thankoffering

During Advent the Stewardship Committee invites Grace members to make a special end-of-the-calendar-year gift to support the ministry of Grace Church. We pray that your Advent Thankoffering is a joyful, generous response to God's surprising blessings of grace and mercy during this past year and during this Advent season.

You'll receive a letter from the Stewardship Committee with a special envelope for your Thankoffering. Or write Advent Thankoffering on the memo line of your check. Whether you place an additional gift in the offering plate, make an online gift, or make an end-of-the-tax-year gift of assets or other funds, you will be helping Grace Church continue to meet its financial obligations and carry out our mission to share the Advent surprise — the good news of Jesus' birth to a world in need.

The Stewardship Committee

If you'd like to know more about the giving of assets or funds from an IRA distribution, please contact Jim McClanahan, Director of Administration and Finance (708-366-6900, ext. 202; jmccclanahan@graceriverforest.org). They're asking congregation members to "adopt a stocking" with a donation of $20 and committee members will do the shopping. More information in the atrium.

The Giving Tree. The Giving Tree in the Grace atrium during November holds tags with wish-list items for clients of local social service agencies. Take a tag from the tree, purchase the gift, and return it to Grace by December 5.

Mitten tree. After December 5 the Social Ministry Committee's Christmas tree in the atrium turns into a "mitten tree," welcoming donations of warm hats, gloves, mittens and scarves to share with neighbors in need.

Healthy Christmas 2021: Stay safe, minimize stress

by Pat Gulik, RN, Parish Nurse

This holiday season looks very different from last year's virtual celebrations. Alleluia! But as we move from Thanksgiving to Christmas in 2021, it's important to remember that things are not entirely back to normal. We still need to take care to protect ourselves and our loved ones as we gather to celebrate the birth of Jesus.

Many of us have already had conversations with family and friends about how to celebrate safely this year. If you're still working on plans, here are some things to consider:

Is everyone vaccinated? This is the most important question. Experts agree that groups of fully vaccinated people can gather freely to celebrate. The decision becomes more difficult when you start mixing in partially vaccinated and unvaccinated or vulnerable people. Think about who your guests are or who you will be socializing with. What have their habits been? Have they mostly been at home or have they been working or socializing in crowded spaces? If you have small children who are not vaccinated or vulnerable older relatives, you may want to invite only those adults who are fully vaccinated. You may want to ask people to get a COVID test. A negative rapid antigen test the day before will indicate that the person is likely not infectious. People who are at risk for severe disease may want to pass on large gatherings this year. Offer to set up a Zoom call for those who can't attend.

Additional suggestions for keeping everyone safe:

- Keep the group small.
- Improve ventilation by opening some windows.
- Encourage/require mask wearing by those who are unvaccinated.
- Avoid crowded events.
- Everyone should wear masks in indoor public places, whether vaccinated or not.

- Anyone who is sick should stay home.

What about travel? Vaccination is required for international travel. To stay safe while traveling domestically the CDC recommends:

- Testing 1-3 days before your trip and 3-5 days after traveling.
- Wearing a mask on public transportation.
- Avoiding crowds.
- Using hand sanitizer.
- Canceling travel if you are exposed to COVID or have symptoms.

Holiday stress. Of course, the Christmas season can be stressful even apart from worrying about COVID. As I thought about what to write this year, I looked back on the Parish Nurse article in the December 2019 Grace Notes. Many of the ideas I wrote about then may again be helpful as you anticipate a more "normal" holiday season.

Take time to reflect and plan. What does this season mean to you? What is important about it, and who is most important? Make the answers to these questions the intentional focus of your holidays instead of the distractions of stuff, shopping, and meaningless events.

Try to maintain some balance.

Remember that spiritual wellness is connected to physical wellness. It's important to do things to maintain our physical health. This includes:

- Regular exercise (a great stress reducer). Make time for your regular workout, or simply take a long walk every day.
- Sleep. Get at least seven hours of sleep every night.
- Eat healthy foods most days of the week, and limit alcohol intake. Don't try to diet during the holidays. Setting a goal of maintaining your present weight is a much more realistic goal. You can indulge now and then for a special event, but try to eat well otherwise. If you do overindulge, don't give up — just resolve to go back to your plan.

- Take care of yourself. Try to do at least one thing to take care of yourself every day. This can be an activity that you love with family or friends, meditation, yoga, a walk, or simply making time to do absolutely nothing.

Keep a positive attitude. As much as we may enjoy the company of our loved ones, holiday gatherings can cause anxiety. Family time can bring up some of the worst emotions — perhaps brought on by socializing with toxic relatives, bad memories of past holiday seasons, or things currently going on in your life. Develop a plan to deal with problems that may come up. Practice what you will say to the cousin who always seems to say something that upsets you. Plan ahead of time with a trusted family member what you will do if things become too stressful and you need to leave a gathering. Try to keep your thoughts positive, and be understanding of others. They are probably stressed, too.

This is the season for giving. Plan some time to share your blessings with others. There are so many ways to give of your time and treasure. Your generosity will help the recipient and will also help you. Studies have shown that giving is good for our health!

Give God a gift — from you to God. Perhaps your gift will be to commit to spending time with God daily. Or maybe there is something that God has asked you to give up. Maybe your gift will be to forgive someone you needed to forgive a long time ago. Whatever it is, make this your most important gift of the season.

Finally, be grateful. This is also the season to be thankful. No matter what we are facing, we can all be grateful for the gift of life. Every day we are on this earth is another opportunity to make a difference and to celebrate life.
